Cotton Crop Short.

From all reports the cotton yield in this section this fall will be extremely short. The reduction in acreage and in the use of fertilizer, the continued heavy rains, and the boll weevil have all wrought havoc with the crop. Many of the farmers say that there are millions of weevils at their destructive work in their fields now, while there are others who state that they are not bothered with them. These latter say that in the early part of the season the weevil perched himself upon the little cotton and waited for the bloom to appear, but in time the pest became convinced that it was either leave or starve, so he left.

NOTED NEGRO DEAD.

Rev. Charles Walker Was Foremost Preacher of His Race.

Rev. Charles T. Walker, commonly said to be the greatest negro preacher of his time, died at his home recently in Augusta, Ga.

Dr. Walker was vice president of the National Baptist convention of the United States; vice president of the Georgia Baptist State convention; moderator of the Walker association; and pastor of Tabernacle Baptist church, Augusta, for the past forty years, excepting five years when he was pastor of the Mount Olive Baptist church, New York city. He founded the colored men's branch Y. M. C. A. 135th street, New York and also founded the colored Y. M. C. A. in Augusta, and was president of the latter organization from its foundation some nineteen years ago to the time of his death. He has traveled extensively in Europe and the holy land and was the author of a number of books on travel as well as sermons. As an evangelist he was known from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast in the United States, and no colored man—not even Booker Washington—ever drew larger crowds than Walker did when people flocked to hear him preach. His church in Augusta was the place of worship of hundreds of northern winter tourists, among them former President Taft, John D. Rockefeller, the late Gen. Rush C. Hawkins, the late Dr. David Gregg and Lyman B. Goff. The institutional church at Augusta, erected by him, but which was not quite completed at the time of his death, cost $185,000.

WILD CATS MADE TAME.

Owner Has Them on Boat and Expects To Take Them to Charleston.

Georgetown, Aug. 7.—One day last week while going through a portion of Santee swamp, P. R. Lambert, a well known woodsman, came across a wild cat's lair. His dog gave the first alarm and as he came to the spot the dog seized an object which Mr. Lambert recognized as a baby wild cat. The little fellow had bravely shown fight, although not more than two weeks old and was soon killed by the dog. Just then Mr. Lambert saw two other little wild cats making away through the bushes and he and a boy with him gave chase and caught them. The mother wild cat had evidently slunk away at the approach of danger, leaving the little ones to their fate. Signs of her bed were there and the spot was still warm where she had been with the kittens playing about her.

The baby wild cats are now in possession of Arthur Lambert, son of the finder, who says they will not be wild cats long as they are already getting, quite tame. He has them on his motor boat, where the writer saw them this afternoon. They are pretty little things, a male and a female of the species, with dull brown backs, spotted bellies and brindle faces. One would take them for sturdy kittens of a house cat until the bob tails suggestive of the belligerent breed are seen standing out stiffly behind in fighting mood or stuck tight between their legs as they attempt to get away. The face is that of a tiger, striped like a tiger from the nose, back and the paws and claws are much more formidable than those of the kitten of the tame cat. Young as they were when first caught, they were fierce feeders and would fight over a piece of raw meat, so they had to be fed apart. They seem quite domestic on the boat and run around playfully when no one is aboard except Capt. Lambert and his mate. For safekeeping, however, they are confined most of the time in a soap box which is arranged neatly for their accommodation. Capt. Lambert says he expects to take them to Charleston on his next trip, where he may make some disposal of them, as it is likely the wildcat nature may develop trouble for him on the boat when they grow larger, notwithstanding the good discipline he is now exacting of the little rascals.

—Miss Mary Francis Walker has returned to the city from St. Matthews, where she has been the guest of Miss Vernon Hill.
